I tested a mk6 R and GTI dsg as well as a mk7 GTI dsg and manual. I couldn't really justify the extra 5-6k for the mk6 R over the GTI. The GTI felt more nimble and just as quick as the R. I do like the extra kit on the R like xenons and the body kit, but it just felt like a slower and heavier car. Not worth the extra $$ I didn't mind the manual in the mk7, but I was concerned about resale ...

In my first DSG GTI I used to use the stick a lot for manual shifting and it's was good, but in the next car (mk6 GTI) decided to get to grips with the paddles and by the time I got into the 7R I knew it would be predominantly manual paddle shifting for me, so I upgraded to a decent set of fully replacement paddles which really do it justice (never liked the short plastic oem shifters). Sure ...

In conclusion, the DSG transmission makes the GTI into the ultimate daily driver. Manual transmissions are an absolute joy, but the DSG is capable of much more than you or me. It can act exactly the way you want it to in any situation — and it's very smart. That being said, I only want a Miata even more now. I guess that's what Autotrader ...
