And much of this is shaped by the failure of communication within The Beauty Queen of Leenane which has to retain its early 1990s setting to allow the stunted transfer of information to retain its credibility. Phillip Ley's set is a aged farm kitchen, still welcoming and cosy but far from its best, even a tad deprived with features that wouldn't have been updated for many decades. The ...

The Beauty Queen of Leenane. By Martin McDonagh. Directed by Maureen Dwyer Produced by Michelle Spanik. Set in the village of Leenane in impoverished rural Ireland, this play title conjures up an image of Irish folklore, love and happy endings – nothing could be further from the truth. Although sometimes referred to as a comedy, it is also a 'hit you where it hurts' shocker. There is ...

The Beauty Queen of Leenane may display a toxic relationship between mother and daughter but it had me questioning who was the perpetrator. Mag displayed a cruel love to isolate her daughter (Maureen), who is desperate to break the unhappy routine she was living in. It certainly had me seeing red flags of signs of emotional abuse to the lengths Mag went. Physical abuse swept in from Maureen ...
